

On the banks of the Luangwa River, in the remote Nsefu sector on the north side of South Luangwa National Park, you'll find the historic Nsefu camp. It was the very first photographic safari camp in Zambia, which dates back to the fifties. We took it over in 1999, and now welcome just 12 guests in the six refurbished brick-and-thatch en-suite rondavels, each with open views across the river. Robin Pope Safaris are the only company operating in this sector of the park making for an exclusive holiday experience.
